TEXTBOOK

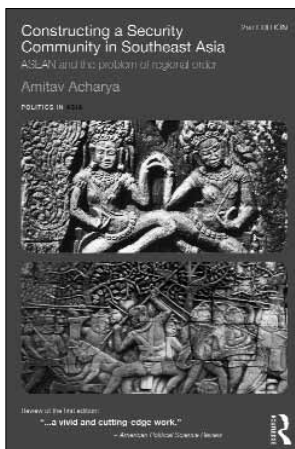

2nd Edition

Constructing a Security Community in Southeast Asia

ASEAN and the Problem of Regional Order

Amitav Acharya, University of Bristol, UK

Series: Politics in Asia

Review for the first edition:

'This is a superb study of ASEAN and the main issues that it faces. Acharya provides great insight into key episodes in ASEAN's development with thorough research and cogent analysis... This book must now be considered the authoritative text on the subject of regional organization in Southeast Asia. One hopes the author will consider a second edition in the not too distant future.' – Journal of the Humanities and Social Sciences of Southeast Asia and Oceania

This second edition of Constructing a Security Community in Southeast Asia takes the excellent framework from Acharya's first edition and brings it up-to-date, looking at ASEAN's comprehensive and critical account of the evolution of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) norms and the viability of the ASEAN way of conflict management. Key issues in determining the future stability of the Southeast Asian and Asia Pacific region are covered, including:

- the effect of expansion
- the application of the ASEAN model of conflict management to the wider Asia Pacific region
- territorial disputes in the South China Sea
- domestic instability in Burma and Cambodia
- military acquisitions on intra-regional relations.

Including additional material on ASEAN's response to terrorism in the wake of the War on Terror and the proposal for an ASEAN security community, this new edition will continue to appeal to students and scholars of Asian security, international relations theory and Southeast Asian studies.

Selected Contents: Introduction: Security Communities and ASEAN in Theoretical Perspective 1. Constructing Security Communities 2. The Evolution of ASEAN Norms and the Emergence of the 'ASEAN Way' 3. ASEAN and the Cambodia Conflict: A Regional Solution to a Regional Problem? 4. Extending ASEAN Norms: Benefits and Burdens of ASEAN-Ten 5. Managing Intra-Regional Relations 6. Handbook of Asian Security Studies

Edited by: Sumit Ganguly, Indiana University, Bloomington, USA, Andrew Scobell, Texas A&M University, USA, Joseph Liow, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore

Despite the richness and complexity of security issues in Asia, and the theoretical and conceptual debates these have spawned, there is no single volume that scholars can turn to for succinct, cogent and dispassionate analysis of these issues. The Handbook of Asian Security Studies addresses this important gap in the literature.

There is no denying the growing strategic significance of Asia to the global strategic order. The rapid growth of China, and now India, promises to shift the global distribution of power in the direction of Asia and poses potential challenges to US strategic pre-eminence in the 21st century. In addition, Japan's post-World War II pacifist disposition in international and regional security affairs is coming under increasing strain in the domestic political sphere as pressure mounts for Tokyo to assume a more activist role as it returns to 'normal statehood'. In response to these shifts – both real and potential, and in an attempt to avert the rivalry that neorealists are predicting for the region – Southeast Asia has attempted to actively engage these major powers, positioning itself and its much-vaunted 'ASEAN Way' as a model for regional order and stability.

Apart from the possible shift in global power structures and its conflict-laden possibilities, the region is also fraught with every conceivable form of conflict, ranging from unresolved territorial disputes (maritime and inland), irredentist claims, intra-state conflicts, transnational terrorist movements and nuclear rivalries. The region is also the site of several states on the verge of failure and others in the incipient stage of national construction.

The significance of this volume lies not only in its considered exploration of security dynamics in the three distinct subregions that make up "Asia", but also in its attempt to bridge the study of these regions themselves by exploring the geopolitical interstices that link each of them. This is done through the set of essays under the section titled 'Cross-Regional Issues', which essentially investigate and analyze security issues and challenges which cut across the geopolitical boundaries of the three regions and/or tie them together.

This volume contains essays by many leading scholars in the field and will be essential reading for all students of Asian security, Asian politics, and International Relations in general.

US-Indian Strategic Cooperation into the 21st Century

More than Words

Edited by Sumit Ganguly and Brian Shoup, both at Indiana University, Bloomington, USA, and Andrew Scobell, US Army War College, Carlisle, USA

In this edited book, leading scholars and analysts draw on new information to trace the origins, evolution and the current state of Indo-US strategic cooperation and explain why important difference remain.

During the Cold War the two states frequently found themselves at odds. With the end of the Cold War and the demise of the Soviet Union, Indo-US security cooperation started in a fitful fashion, but in recent years it has acquired considerable stability. The armed forces of the two states have participated in exercises on land, sea and air and have also carried out joint humanitarian missions. These notably include questions pertaining to the future of India's nuclear and ballistic missile programs, US-Pakistan ties and India's links with Iran.

This volume will be of great interest to students of South Asian politics, Asian security, US foreign policy and security studies in general.

Selected Contents: 1. Introduction 2. Are We Present at the Creation?: Alliance Theory and the Indo-US Strategic Convergence? 3. Incompatible Objectives and Shortsighted Policies: US Strategies toward India 4. An Overview of Indo-US Strategic Cooperation: A Rollercoaster of a Relationship 5. Prospects for US-India Counterterrorism Cooperation: An American View 8. Indo-U.S. Counter-Terrorism Cooperation: Past, Present and Future 9. Chinese Security Policy

Structure, Power and Politics

Robert Ross, Boston College, MA, USA

Reflecting a coherent realist approach to the role of power and the pursuit of security in an anarchic international system, Prof. Ross's scholarship on China's international behaviour covers such fundamental areas as the role of international structure in state behavior, the use of force in international politics (including deterrence, coercive diplomacy, and war), and the sources of great-power conflict and cooperation and balance of power politics, with a recent focus on international power transitions. The research integrates the realist literature with key issues in Chinese foreign policy, thereby placing China's behaviour in the larger context of the international political system.

While emphasizing the role of the international system on Chinese behavior, the book also examines the role of domestic politics in Chinese policy making. In doing so, it asks under what circumstances have domestic politics taken precedence over China's strategic interests, and considers the resulting impact of Chinese domestic politics on China's security and its bilateral relationships. The articles also focus on key aspects of Chinese foreign policy, such as US-China relations during the Cold War and the post-Cold war era, China's invasion of Vietnam in 1979, and the ensuing conflict over Indochina, great-power conflict on the Korean Peninsula, and the Taiwan issue. More recent issues covered include the rise of Chinese economic and military power for both US-China relations and the emerging regional security order, as reflected in the behavior of China's neighbors throughout East Asia.

This book will be of great interest to all students of Chinese Security and Foreign Policy, Chinese and Asian Politics, US foreign policy and International Security in general.

A Rising China and Security in East Asia

Identity Construction and Security Discourse

Rex Li, Liverpool John Moores University, UK

Series: Politics in Asia

This volume provides a comprehensive and in-depth analysis of the security discourse of Chinese policy elites on the major powers in East Asia in relation to China's self-perception as a rising power. It is the first book-length study that utilizes International Relations theories systematically to analyze Chinese security perceptions of the United States, Japan and Russia, and the debate among Chinese international relations specialists on how China should respond to the perceived challenge from the major powers to its rise to a global status.

Rex Li argues that the security discourse of Chinese policy analysts is closely linked to their conception of China's identity and their desire and endeavour to construct a great power identity for China. Drawing on extensive and up-to-date Chinese-language sources, the study demonstrates that Chinese elites perceive the power, aspirations and security strategies of other East Asian powers primarily in terms of their implications for China's pursuit of great power status. This new work will contribute significantly to the on-going academic and policy debate on the nature and repercussions of China's rise.

This book will be essential reading for undergraduate and postgraduate students and scholars of Asian security, China's foreign relations, security studies and international relations.

Selected Contents: 1. A Rising China, IR Theories and Chinese Security Discourse of East Asian Powers 2. Hegemonic Aspirations in a Unipolar World: US Security Strategy under the George Bush Snr and Bill Clinton Presidencies 3. Human Security contributes to this new multidimensional conception of security, analyzes its strengths and weaknesses, and focuses on its implications for analysis and action.
