Geographies of Developing Areas

The Global South in a Changing World

Glyn Williams and Paula Meth, both at University of Sheffield, UK and Katie Willis, Royal Holloway, UK

Rather than presenting the global South to students as a set of problems (rapid urbanization, population growth and poverty), this textbook focuses on the diversity of life in the South, and looks at the role it plays in shaping and responding to current global change.

The text integrates 'traditional' concerns of development geographers (such as economic development and social inequality) with aspects of the global South usually given less attention (such as cultural identity and political conflict). Divided into four main sections, it:

- argues that images of the so called 'Third World' are powerful but also problematic
- looks at the impact these have on peoples lives and identities

- explores how the south is shaping, and being shaped by global economic, political and cultural processes
- explores the possibilities and limitations of development.

The global South is introduced to students, not only via contemporary debates in development, but also through current research in social, cultural and political geographies of developing areas. Students are supported throughout with clear examples, explanations of key terms, ideas and debates and introductions to the wider literature in this field. Thought-provoking and accessible, this book presents a fresh view of the global South that challenges students' preconceptions and promotes lively debate.

With a contemporary full colour internal design and a wide range of pedagogical features that aid student learning and revision, this textbook is a key resource for courses in development geography.

Selected Contents: Part 1: Representing the Global South 1. Introduction 2. Imagining the South Part 2: The South in a Global World 3. The South in a Globalising World 4. South in Changing World Order 5. The South and Changing Global Identities Part 3: Living in the South 6. Making a Living 7. Political Lives 8. The Development Reader

Edited by Sharad Chari and Stuart Corbridge, both at London School of Economics and Political Science, University of London, UK

The Development Reader brings together fifty-four key readings on development history, theory and policy: Adam Smith and Karl Marx meet, among others, Robert Wade, Amartya Sen and Jeffrey Sachs. It shows how debates around development have been structured by different readings of the roles played by markets, empire, nature and difference in the organization of world affairs. For example, present-day concerns about economic liberalization echo long-standing debates around free-trade, extended divisions of labour and national economic policy. Likewise, old debates about empire are re-appearing in critical perspectives on US policy in the Middle East.

While there is little room today for old-fashioned environmental or cultural determinism, the attention now being given to climate change and a clash of civilisations shows that questions of nature and difference remain at the centre of development politics. Section and individual extract introductions guide students through the material and bind the readings into a coherent whole. Organized chronologically as well as thematically, it offers an intellectual history of the debates and political struggles that swirl around development.

By bringing together intellectual history and contemporary development issues in this way, The Development Reader breaks fresh ground. It will have broad appeal across the humanities and social sciences, and is essential reading for students of contemporary development issues, practitioners and campaigners.

Selected Contents: Part 1: The Object of Development
Part 2: Markets, Empire, Nature, Difference Part 3: Reform, Revolution, Resistance Part 4: Promethean Visions
Part 5: Challenges to the Mainstream: The Political Economy of Growth Part 6: The Hubris of Development

3rd Edition

Green Development

Environment and Sustainability in a Developing World

W.M. Adams, University of Cambridge, UK

The concept of sustainability lies at the core of the challenge of environment and development and the way governments, business and environmental groups respond to it. Green Development provides a clear and coherent analysis of sustainable development in both theory and practice.

The third edition has been updated to reflect advances in ideas and changes in international policy.

Greater attention has been given to political ecology, environmental risk and the environmental impacts of development.

This fully revised edition discusses:

- the origins of thinking about sustainability and sustainable development and its evolution to the present day
- the ideas that dominate mainstream sustainable development (ecological modernisation, market environmentalism and environmental economics)
- the nature and diversity of alternative ideas about sustainability that challenge 'business as usual' thinking (ecosocialism, ecofeminism, deep ecology and political ecology)
- the dilemmas of sustainability in the context of dryland degradation, deforestation, biodiversity conservation, dam construction and urban and industrial development
- the nature of policy choices about the environment and development strategies and between reformist and radical responses to the contemporary global dilemmas.

Selected Contents: 1. The Dilemma of Sustainability
2. The Roots of Sustainable Development 3. The Development of Sustainable Development 4. Sustainable Development: Making the Mainstream 5. Mainstream Sustainable Development 6. Delivering Mainstream Sustainable Development 7. Countercurrents in Sustainable Development 8. Dryland Political Ecology 9. Sustainable Forests? 10. The Politics of Preservation 11. Sustainability and River Control 12. Industrial and Urban Hazard 13. Green Development: Reformism or Radicalism?

3rd Edition

Tourism and Sustainability

NEW

Development, Globalization and New Tourism in the Third World

Martin Mowforth, University of Plymouth, UK and Ian Munt

Tourism and Sustainability critically explores and challenges what have emerged as the most significant universal geopolitical norms of the last half century – development, globalization and sustainability – and through the lens of new forms of tourism demonstrates how we can better understand and get to grips with the rapidly changing new global order.

This third edition has been extensively updated and includes new material on:

- poverty reduction, livelihoods and pro-poor tourism
- new forms of tourism in cities
- continuing growth of the fair trade movement
- tourism's contribution to climate change
- volunteer and 'gap' tourism
- affect of disasters on new tourism.

Drawing on a range of examples from across the Third World, Tourism and Sustainability illustrates the social, economic and environmental conditions for the growth of new tourism. The book is original in its assessment of tourism through the lens of power - who holds it; how it is used; and who benefits from the exercise of power in the tourism industry. Additionally, the analysis is an interdisciplinary one and the book will therefore be useful to students of Human Geography, Environmental Studies and Studies, Politics, Development Studies, Anthropology and Business Studies as well as Tourism itself.

Selected Contents: 1. Introduction 2. Globalisation, Sustainability, Development 3. Power and Tourism 4. Tourism and Sustainability 5. A New Class of Tourist: Trendies on the Trail 6. Socio-Environmental Organisation: Where Shall we Save Next? 7. The Industry: Lies, Damned Lies and Sustainability 8. 'Hosts' and Destinations: For What we are About to Receive... 9. Urban Tourism 10. Governance, Governments and Tourism: Selling the Third World 11. New Tourism and the Poor: Making Poverty History? 12. Conclusion

An Everyday Geography of the Global South

Jonathan Rigg, University of Durham, UK

Taking a broad perspective of livelihoods, this book draws on more than ninety case studies from thirty-six countries across Asia, Africa and Latin America to examine how people are engaging and living with modernity. This extends from changes in the ways that households operate, to how and why people take on new work and acquire new skills, how migration and mobility are becoming increasingly common features of existence, and how aspirations and expectations are being reworked under the influence of modernization.

To date, this is the only book which takes such an approach to building an understanding of the global South. By using the experience of the non-Western world to illuminate and inform mainstream debates in geography, and in beginning from the lived experiences of 'ordinary' people, this book provides an alternative insight into a range of geographical debates. The clarity of argument and its use of detailed case studies makes this book an invaluable resource for students.

Selected Contents: 1. What's with the Everyday?: The Everyday, Globalization and the Global South 2. Structures and Agencies: Lives, Living and Livelihoods 3. Life Styles and Life Courses: The Structures & Rhythms of Everyday Life 4. Making a Living in the Global South: Livelihood Transitions 5. Living with Modernity 6. Living on the Move 7. Africa Today

Culture, Economics, Religion, Security

Heather Deegan, Middlesex University, UK

While some countries seem to be moving forward with greater levels of confidence, democracy and stability, others continue to be mired in conflict and religious/ethnic division. Islam has been spreading rapidly and during the last decade the Muslim population in Africa has increased by an estimated fifty per cent to 149 million, a higher figure than in the countries of the Middle East. Equally, terrorist attacks have occurred and links have been established between Al Qaeda groups/sympathizers and certain countries and political elites. It is clear then that many African states face challenges in the decade ahead and those difficulties will be of considerable concern to the wider community.

Africa Today provides students with an introduction to the key contemporary issues that the continent faces.

Selected Contents: Introduction 1. Looking Back in Time 2. Africa Today 3. Religion, Culture and Gender 4. Development Matters 5. Politics and Prospects of Democracy 6. Corruption 7. Conflict and De-Militarisation 8. Disease and Human Security 9. Terrorism 10. International Focus 11. Conclusion

Conflict and Development

Andrew Williams, University of St Andrews, UK and Roger Mac Ginty, University of York, UK

Over the past decade, a new awareness of the relationship between conflicts and development has grown. Developmental factors can act as a trigger for violence, as well as for ending violence and for triggering post-conflict reconstruction.

This valuable introductory text explains reviews and critically evaluates this complex relationship. It focuses on intra-state conflicts and complex political emergencies that combine transnational and internal characteristics. Attention is also given to inter-state conflicts. Chapters emphasize how the relationship between conflict and development traverses many scales (macro, meso and micro) and dimensions (economic, political and cultural). Furthermore it explains how different developmental challenges and opportunities emerge along the full-life cycle of conflict. Specifically, the role of poverty, state, market, civil society, globalization, humanitarian aid, refugees, gender and health within conflict dynamics is examined. The book also investigates specific developmental issues emerging during conflict management and post conflict reconstruction.

Selected Contents: 1. Introduction 2. Poverty and the Political Economy of Violent Conflicts 3. Violent Conflicts and Institutions 4. Violent Conflicts, Gender, Health and Refugees 5. Conflict Management, Resolution and Development 6. Humanitarian Aid and Violent Conflict 7. Post-Conflict Reconstruction and Development

Cities and Development

Jo Beall and Sean Fox, London School of Economics, UK

Cities and Development provides a critical analysis of the contribution that cities have made to social, political and economic development and highlights the key challenges facing urban policy makers and planners. It critically examines strategies and interventions that have failed to solve persistent urban poverty and growing inequality. It also investigates the complexities of managing and governing urban environments, and explores both technical and political responses to complex social and ecological problems. Issues of urban crime, violence and the spectre of war in contemporary cities are explored and contrasted with the possibilities that cities create for achieving prosperity and social justice. Moving beyond the 'Third World Cities' literature, the book emphasises universal patterns in contemporary urbanism, while stressing the importance of context in the construction of a theory of urban development.

This book provides an overall framework for understanding the cities-development relationship while engaging with urban theory and contemporary urban policy issues. Containing case studies, it is intended for students and researchers of urban studies, development studies, urban planning, sociology and politics, as well as policy makers concerned with poverty reduction and sustainable economic development.

Selected Contents: 1. Introduction: Development in the First Urban Century 2. Urbanization and Development in Historical Perspective 3. Cities and Economic Development 4. Urban Poverty and Inequality 5. Urban Management and the Environment 6. Urban Politics and City Governance 7. Cities and Conflict: Crime, Violence and War 8. Global Finance and Development

David Hudson, University College London, UK

The text will help the reader develop a critical understanding of the nature of finance and development. Using various perspectives and examples introduced in the text the reader will be able to develop their own position on questions of finance and financing. Throughout the text the reader is encouraged to see the financial processes as embedded within the broader structure of social relationships. Finance is defined and demonstrated to be money and credit, but also, crucially, the social relationships and institutions that enable the creation and distribution of credit and the consequences thereof.

Non-Governmental Organisations and Development

David Lewis, London School of Economics, UK and Nazneen Kanji, International Institute for Environment and Development, London, UK

The book begins with a discussion of the wide diversity of NGOs and their roles, and locates their recent rise to prominence within broader histories of struggle as well as within the ideological context of neo-liberalism. It then moves on to analyze how interest in NGOs has both reflected and informed wider theoretical trends and debates within development studies, before analyzing NGOs and their practices, using a broad range of short case studies of successful and unsuccessful interventions. This critical overview will be useful to students of development studies at undergraduate and masters levels, as well as to more general readers and practitioners.

Water Resources and Development

Clive Agnew and Philip Woodhouse

This engaging and insightful text contributes an interdisciplinary analysis of the role of water resources in shaping opportunities and constraints for development. This is a subject on which much analysis has been written from either scientific/engineering or social/political perspectives, but seldom integrates both. The central message of the book is that defining 'successful' water management strategies requires first establishing our development goals, and the implicit trade-offs between water consumption and conservation.

Selected Contents: 1. Water Management Best Practice in the Twenty-First Century Part 1 2. Economic Growth and Increasing Water Demand 3. Water Resources in Colonial and Post-independence Agricultural Development 4. Water and Development Under Conditions of Climate Change 5. Catchments and Conflicts Part 2 6. Disaster and Development

Andrew Collins, Northumbria University, UK

This book provides accessible and up-to-date analyses of disasters and development linkages, addressing planning and response activities that accompany this field. Social, economic and environmental hazards, vulnerabilities and risks are examined in an interdisciplinary way, and the part of the book focused on disaster-orientated practice explores accompanying learning and planning processes. These include early warning and risk management, disaster mitigation, response and recovery as development concerns.

Postcolonialism and Development

Cheryl McEwan, Durham University, UK

This volume provides a valuable and unique introductory text that explains, reviews and critically evaluates recent debates about postcolonial approaches and their implications for development studies. It unpacks the difficult, complex and important aspects of the relationships between postcolonial approaches and development studies, making them accessible, interesting and relevant to both students and researchers. Up-to-date illustrations and examples from across the regions of the world bring to life theoretical and conceptual issues that have, all too often, been abstract and inaccessible.

By proposing an agenda for theory and practice, the book aims to provide an outline of a coherent project of postcolonial development studies, which is currently absent from contemporary analysis.

Southeast Asian Development

Andrew McGregor, University of Otago, New Zealand

Divided into accessible thematic chapters this book adopts a unique perspective of equitable development to outline the strengths and weaknesses of the transformations taking place in the Southeast Asian region. Focusing on four key themes: equality and inequality; political freedom and opportunity; empowerment and participation; and environmental sustainability, these concepts are used to explore Southeast Asian development and trace the impacts that the growing popularity of market-led and grassroots approaches are having upon economic, political and social processes. Whilst the diversity of the region is emphasised so are some of the homogenising trends such as the concentration of wealth and services in urban areas and the subsequent migration of rural people into urban factories and squatter settlements. The ongoing commercialization and industrialization of rural agriculture as well as the expansion of non-farm income earning opportunities in rural spaces, and the alarming rates of environmental degradation which threaten health and livelihoods are also exposed.

Selected Contents: 1. Introducing Southeast Asian Development 2. Setting the Scene for Development: Pre-Colonial and Colonial Southeast Asia 3. Economic Development 4. Political Development 5. Tourism and Development in the Developing World

David J. Telfer, Brock University, Ontario, Canada and Richard Sharpley

This book provides an introduction to the tourism-development process. Focusing specifically on the less developed world and drawing on contemporary case studies, it questions many assumptions about the role of tourism in development and, in particular, highlights the dilemmas faced by destinations seeking to achieve development through tourism.

Combining an overview of essential concepts, theories and knowledge related to tourism and development with an analysis of contemporary issues and debates, Tourism and Development in the Developing World is a valuable resource for those investigating tourism issues in developing countries. It is also useful for students studying related subjects, including development studies, geography, international relations, politics, sociology and area studies.

Selected Contents: 1. Introduction: Tourism in Developing Countries 2. Tourism and Sustainable Development 3. Globalisation and Tourism 4. The Tourism Planning and Development Process 5. Community Response to Tourism 6. The Consumption of Tourism 7. Assessing the Impacts of Tourism 8. Conclusion: The Tourism Development Dilemma

FORTHCOMING

Arresting Development

Craig Johnson, University of Guelph, California, USA

This book is about the ways in which ideologies shape the construction of knowledge for development. A central theme concerns the impact of neo-liberalism on contemporary development theory and research. The book's main objectives are twofold. One is to understand the ways in which neo-liberalism has framed and defined the 'meta-theoretical' aims and assumptions of what is deemed relevant, important and appropriate to the study of development. A second is to explore the theoretical and ideological terms on which an alternative to neo-classical theory may be theorized, idealized and pursued. By tracing the impact of Marxism, postmodernism and liberalism on the study of development, Arresting Development contends that development has become increasingly fragmented in terms of the theories and methodologies it uses to understand and explain complex and contextually-specific processes of economic development and social change. Outside of neo-classical economics (and related fields of rational choice), the notion that social science can or should aim to develop general and predictive theories about development has become mired in a philosophical and political orientation that questions the ability of scholars to make universal or comparative statements about the nature of history, cultural diversity and progress.

Selected Contents 1. Deconstructing 'Knowledge for Development' 2. The 'Poverty of History' in Neo-classical Discourse: Positivism, New Institutionalism and 'the Tragedy of the Commons' 3. Exporting the Model: Marxism, Postmodernism and Development 4. Development as Discourse: Contesting the Politics of 'Post-Development' 5. Development as Freedom of Choice: From Measurement to Empowerment to Rational Choice 6. Advancing Knowledge for Social Change

Cultural Heritage and Tourism in the Developing World

Edited by Dallen J. Timothy, Brigham Young University, USA and Gyan Nyaupane, Arizona State University, USA

Series: Contemporary Geographies of Leisure, Tourism and Mobility

Cultural Heritage and Tourism in the Developing World is the first book of its kind to synthesize global and regional issues, challenges and practices related to cultural heritage and tourism, specifically in less-developed nations. This seminal book tackles the issues through theoretical discourse, ideas and problems that underlay heritage tourism in terms of conservation, management, economics and underdevelopment, politics and power, resource utilization, colonialism, and various other antecedent notions that have shaped the development of heritage tourism in the less-developed regions of the world.

It comprises two sections. The first highlights the broader conceptual underpinnings, debates, and paradigms in the realm of heritage tourism in developing regions. The second examines heritage tourism and its issues in specific regions, including the Pacific Islands, South Asia, the Caribbean, China and Northeast Asia, South-East Asia, Sub-Saharan Africa, Central and Eastern Europe, the Middle East and North Africa, and Latin America.

This volume develops frameworks that are useful tools for heritage managers, planners and policy-makers, researchers, and students in understanding the complexity of cultural heritage and tourism in the developing world. Unlike many other books written about developing regions, it provides insiders' perspectives, as most of the empirical chapters are authored by the individuals who live or have lived in the various regions and have a greater understanding of the region's culture, history, and operational frameworks in the realm of cultural heritage.

This book will be of significant interest to students and researchers of tourism, culture and heritage in both the developed and developing worlds.

Selected Contents: 1. Introduction Section 1: Cultural Heritage and Tourism in the Developed World 2. Heritage Resources in the Tourism Product 3. Protecting Heritage Relics, Places and Traditions 4. Politics of Heritage 5. Impacts of Heritage Tourism Section 2: Regional Perspectives 6. Pacific Islands 7. South Asia 8. Caribbean 9. The Postcolonial Politics of Development

Ilan Kapoor, York University, Canada

Series: Postcolonial Politics

'Kapoor forces development theory and practice to face an unlikely combination of critical traditions: European social theory, postcolonial analysis, and dependencia thinking. In relatively few words, he hits the missing notes in standard and critical scores of foreign aid, democratization, local participation, liberal modernity, basic needs, structural adjustment, good governance, and human rights. Then he serves up Homi Bhabha as antidote. Terrific – and very stylish.'
– Christine Sylvester, Lancaster University, UK

'Development studies are usually long on policy and short on theory. By juxtaposing postcolonial theory and development studies, this book offers a social theory perspective on development and does so in a lucid manner that gives both postcolonial theory and development new depth. It presents a 'self-reflexive and democratic postcolonial politics' as a tool to make development more just.' – Jan Nederveen Pieterse, University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign, USA

This book uses a postcolonial lens to question development's dominant cultural representations and institutional practices, investigating the possibilities for a transformatory postcolonial politics.

Selected Contents: Introduction Part 1: Postcolonial Insights? 1. Capitalism, Culture, Agency: Dependency versus Postcolonial Theory 2. The Culture of Development Policy: Basic Needs, Structural Adjustment, Good Governance and Human Rights Part 2: Postcolonial Complicity and Self-Reflexivity? 3. Hyper-Self-Reflexive Development?: Spivak on Representing the Third World 'Other' 4. Participatory Development, Complicity and Desire 5. Foreign Aid as G(r)ift Part 3: Postcolonial Politics? 6. Deliberative Democracy or Agonistic Pluralism?: The Relevance of the Habermas-Mouffe Debate for Third World Politics 7. Acting in a Tight Spot: Homi Bhabha's Postcolonial Politics 8. NGOs as Advocates for Development in a Globalising World

Edited by Barbara Rugendyke, University of New England, Australia

This book traces the recent growth in NGO advocacy. Rugendyke presents empirical findings about the impacts of NGO advocacy activity on the policies and practices of global and regional institutions. The research reveals the mixed successes of advocacy as a strategy for addressing the ongoing causes of poverty in developing nations. Case studies illustrate the advocacy work of Australian NGOs, of British NGOs policies about engaging with multinationals, of Oxfam International's advocacy directed at World Bank policies and NGO advocacy in the Mekong Region.

Adopting an interdisciplinary approach, the mixed successes of advocacy as a strategy used by NGOs in attempting to address the ongoing causes of poverty in developing nations are examined. This volume is a useful aid to researchers, students and lecturers and to development practitioners interested in advocacy as a development strategy

Selected Contents: 1. Lilliputians or Leviathans?: NGOs as Advocates Part 1: Contesting the Global Futures - From Charity to Challenge 2. Charity to Advocacy: Changing Agendas of Australian NGOs 3. Speaking Out: Australian NGOs as Advocates Part 2: Towards Global Equality?: Internationalisation, Oxfam and the World Bank 4. Global Poverty, Ethics and Human Rights

The Role of Multilateral Organisations

Desmond McNeill, University of Oslo, Norway and Asunción Lera StClair, University of Bergen, Norway

Series: Rethinking Globalizations

Severe poverty is one of the greatest moral challenges of our times. The current development aid framework may be seen as seeking to make globalization work for the poor; and multilateral organizations, such as the World Bank and UNDP, are powerful global actors, not only by virtue of their financial resources, but also in their role as global norm-setting bodies and as sources of hegemonic knowledge production about poverty and poverty reduction.

This book examines in depth the activities of the two major multilateral development organizations: the World Bank, the United Nations Development Programme and two specific initiatives where 'ethics' and or human rights and poverty have been explicitly in focus: in the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the Inter-American Development Bank. On the basis of these detailed empirical studies, the authors critically analyze how ethics are being, or may be, used to articulate the responsibilities of development agencies and their staff for a fair and effective way to fight and prevent poverty so as to guide and motivate their knowledge and policies. They seek to answer the question: What place, if any, do ethical thinking and questions of global justice have in the policies of organizations in the multilateral development system?

Global Poverty, Ethics and Human Rights will be of interest to researchers and advanced students, as well as practitioners and activists in the fields of international relations, development studies and international political economy, political philosophy, development ethics and applied ethics more generally.

Selected Contents: 1. Introduction 2. Ethics and Human Rights: The Emerging Global Agenda 3. Responsibility, Expertise and the Challenge of Global Poverty 4. The World Bank: The Internal Dynamics of a Complex Organization 5. UNDP: The Human Development Paradigm 6. UNESCO: 'Poverty as a Violation of Human Rights' 7. International Politics of HIV/AIDS

Global Disease-Local Pain

Hakan Seckinelgin, London School of Economics and Political Science, University of London, UK

This book examines the global governance of the HIV/AIDS epidemic, interrogating the role of this international system and global discourse on HIV/AIDS interventions. The geographical focus is Sub-Saharan Africa since the region has been at the forefront of these interventions. There is a need to understand the relationship between the international political environment and the impact of resulting policies on HIV/AIDS in the context of people's lives.

Hakan Seckinelgin points out a certain disjuncture between this governance structure and the way people experience the disease in their everyday lives. Although the structure allows people to emerge as policy relevant target groups and beneficiaries, the articulation of needs and design of policy interventions tends to reflect international priorities rather than people's thinking on the problem. In other words, he argues that while the international interventions highlight the importance attributed to the HIV/AIDS problem, the nature of the system does not allow interventions to be far reaching and sustainable.

Offering a critical contribution to the understanding of the problems in HIV/AIDS in Sub-Saharan Africa, International Politics of HIV/AIDS will be invaluable to students and researchers of health, international politics and development.

The Global Health Care Chain

From the Pacific to the World

John Connell, The University of Sydney, Australia

Series: Routledge Research in Population and Migration

This book provides the first detailed analysis of the growing phenomenon of the international migration of skilled health workers. For more than a quarter of a century there has been significant international migration of skilled health workers, but in the last decades, with critical changes in both sending and receiving countries, few parts of the world are now unaffected by the consequences of the migration of health workers, either as sources, destinations or sometimes both. The book takes the understanding of health worker migration substantially beyond the more scattered and fragmented papers and anecdotes that largely existed before, into the first consolidated analysis. In doing so it reveals its exceptional significance for both sending and receiving countries (in economic, social and political terms), provides the only analysis of remittances of health workers, casts new light on gender, globalization, transnational linkages, the trade in services (linked to GATS) and the overall relationship between migration and development, and reviews practical responses and solutions.

Selected Contents: 1. Introduction: The Global Rise of Skilled Migration 2. The Global Context 3. The South Pacific: At the End of the Line 4. The New Skilled Migration: Into the Global Chain 5. The Impact of Health Worker Migration 6. Policy Implications 7. Conclusion

Understanding the Social Dimension of Sustainability

Edited by Jesse Dillard, Veronica Dujon and

Mary C. King, all at Portland State University, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Development and Society

The imperative of the twenty-first century is sustainability: to raise the living standards of the world's poor and to achieve and maintain high levels of social health among the affluent nations while simultaneously reducing and reversing the environmental damage wrought by human activity. Scholars and practitioners are making progress toward environmental and economic sustainability, but we have very little understanding of the social dimension of sustainability. This volume is an ambitious, multi-disciplinary effort to identify the key elements of social sustainability through an examination of what motivates its pursuit and the conditions that promote or detract from its achievement. Included are theoretical and empirical pieces; examination of international and local efforts; discussions highlighting experiences in both the developing and industrialized nations; and a substantial focus on business practices. Contributors are grounded in Sociology, Economics, Business Administration, Public Administration, Public Health, Geography, Education and Natural Resource Management.

Tourism at the Grassroots

Villagers and Visitors in the Asia-Pacific

Edited by John Connell, University of Sydney, Australia and Barbara Rugendyke, University of New England, Australia

Series: Contemporary Geographies of Leisure, Tourism and Mobility

In two regions where tourism is of considerable economic importance, eastern Asia and the Pacific, there have been remarkably few studies of the impacts of tourism in rural areas. Moreover, the shift towards ecotourism, touted as a more environmentally benign form of tourism, has extended the reach of tourism into more remote and fragile environments. This shift has drawn more local people in rural and remote areas into a partly tourism economy, involving them as participants in the tourist industry. Yet little is known about who have been the beneficiaries of these developments.

This new collection focuses on both the interactions between tourists and villagers, and the impacts of tourism at the local level, considering economic, social, cultural and environmental changes. It traces changes in structures of vulnerability as tourism becomes more prominent, the role of tourism in community development (or localised tension) and examines issues of governance, the role of tour operators as intermediaries, cultural change and other local impacts. In short, it examines the changing role of tourism in local development (or its absence).

Selected Contents: 1. Introduction: Tourism and Local People in the Asia-Pacific Region 2. Another (Unintended) Legacy of Captain Cook?: The Evolution of Rapanui (Easter Island) Tourism 3. Moderate Expectations and Benign Exploration: Tourism in Papua New Guinea 4. 'Everything is Truthful Here': Custom Village Tourism in Tanna, Vanuatu 5. The Whole Nine Villages: Local Level Development through Mass Tourism in Tibetan China 6. Weapons of the Workers: Employees in the Fiji Hotel Scene 7. On the Beach: Small-Scale Tourism in Samoa 8. After the Bomb in a Balinese Village 9. Sustainability and Security: Employing Local People in Lombok Hotels, Indonesia 10. Priorities, People and Preservation: Nature-Based Tourism at Cuc Phuong National Park, Vietnam 11. Communities on Edge: Conflicts over Community Tourism in Thailand 12. Community-Based Ecotourism in Thailand 13. Ecotourism and Indigenous Communities: The Lower Kinabatangan Experience in Borneo 14. Adventures, Picnics and Nature Tourism: Ecotourism in Malaysian National Parks 15. Conclusion: Marginal People and Marginal Places?

MAJOR WORKS: 4 VOLUME SET

Sustainability

Edited by Michael Redclift

Series: Critical Concepts in the Social Sciences

This four-volume set introduces the reader to 'sustainability' as a concept, a contested idea and a political goal, and brings together a range of articles and published papers that have influenced the course of thinking in social science.

Southeast Asian Development

Edited by Jonathan Rigg, University of Durham, UK

Series: Critical Concepts in the Social Sciences

This new three-volume collection is guided by a broad definition of 'development' and does not limit itself to development economics or even to development studies. Papers on development issues by anthropologists, historians, sociologists, geographers, political scientists, as well as by economists are represented. The works are ordered by context and theme, to enable the intellectual progression of debates to be more easily identified.

The structure and range of works included within Southeast Asian Development ensure that it will be an invaluable reference resource for students and scholars alike.

Selected Contents: Volume 1 Introduction: 'Southeast Asian Development: An Introductory Essay' Jonathan Rigg
Part 1: History, Geography, and Colonialism: Development Before the Development Project Histories and Geographies of Development Part 2: Rural Society, Community, and Culture Pre-Capitalist Rural Societies Volume 2 Part 3: Urbanization, Industrialization, and Modern Lives and Livelihoods Urbanization and Urban Growth Volume 3 Part 4: Making Miracles, Creating Crises: The Political Economy of Growth and Crisis Development and Developmental States

MAJOR WORKS: 4 VOLUME SET

Gender and Development

Edited by Janet Momsen, University of California, Davis, USA

Series: Critical Concepts in Development Studies

NEW

It is increasingly apparent that the growing challenges facing development scholars, policy-makers, and practitioners in the twenty-first century require a more sophisticated understanding of the importance of gender than has hitherto been the case. At a time when the forces of globalization are transforming economies and peoples, women throughout the world are still marginalized both economically and politically. In particular, new rulings by the World Trade Organization threaten the exports of many developing countries and jobs - often those held by women - are being lost. Such changes are also significantly affecting men and masculinities as gender roles and relations are transformed. Furthermore, global warming is threatening environments and natural resources, such as forests and water, and creating specific - but different - problems for both men and women in developing countries.

Edited and introduced by a leading researcher and activist, this four-volume Major Work in the Routledge Critical Concepts in Development series brings together both cutting-edge and canonical research about gender and development which will enable development scholars, policy-makers, and workers to understand and address such challenges more effectively. Moreover, work on gender and development continues to be very wide-ranging, and increasingly draws on scholarship and insights from across the social sciences and beyond. Much of this literature remains inaccessible, or is highly specialized and compartmentalized, so that it is ever more difficult to gain an informed and comprehensive overview of the current and historical issues and debates. The sheer scale of the growth in research output in gender and development - and the breadth of the field - makes this collection especially timely and meets the demand for a wide-ranging, multidisciplinary perspective on this fascinating and important subject.

Volume one ('Theory and Classics') provides an historical overview of the classic early contributions to the field of gender and development and brings together the best foundational scholarship, beginning with a piece from Ester Boserup's Woman's Role in Economic Development (1970). It also includes theoretical papers on the changing approaches to gender and development, and on development policy in relation to gender.

Volume two ('Policy and Practice') gathers together the official texts in gender and development, including the major UN treaties, together with key conference conclusions concerning gender and development. The volume includes material drawing on the Women's Conferences in Mexico City, Nairobi and Beijing, and on Beijing +5 and Beijing +10. In addition, the volume contains material from the Cairo Conference on Population, and from the Rio de Janeiro and Johannesburg Environment Conferences. Volume two also includes material on the Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination (CEDAW), the Commission on the Status of Women, the Millennium Development Goals, and the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM). The US Percy Amendment and similar policy statements from the UK and Canada, and from the World Bank, are also included.

The third and fourth volumes are concerned with economic and cultural issues respectively and are illustrated by case studies from the global South. Volume three ('Natural Resource Use, Labour, Microfinance') focuses on the gender division of labour and explores issues such as domestic service; factory work; tourism; agriculture; and sex work. It also includes scholarship on issues such as gendered access to natural resources including land and water.

Volume four ('Aspects of Culture and Health') collects the essential scholarship concerned with recent changes related to global economic and political restructuring. Journal articles and other material here include studies on migration; reproductive rights; health (including the gender aspects of HIV/AIDS); violence and warfare; identity; gendered political roles; gender and fieldwork; positionality, indigenous peoples; and gender roles in cultural survival and biodiversity.

With introductions, newly written by the editor, which place the collected material in its historical and intellectual context, Gender and Development is an essential collection destined to be valued by scholars, students, and practitioners as a vital research resource.

Selected Contents: Volume 1: Theory and Classics Volume 2: Laws and Methods Volume 3: Natural Resource Use, Labour, Microfinance Volume 4: Social, Political, Cultural, Sexuality, and Health Networks

With a contemporary full colour internal design and a wide range of pedagogical features that aid student learning and revision, this textbook is a key resource for courses in development geography.

Divided into four main sections, it:

- argues that images of the so called 'Third World' are powerful but also problematic
- Explores how the south is shaping, and being shaped by global economic, political and cultural processes
- looks at the impact these have on peoples' lives and identities
- explores the possibilities and limitations of development.

Key Features for this exciting new title include:

- 4 colour throughout
- 60 full colour photographs and 50 figures
- wide range of pedagogical features: key concept/thinker boxes, review questions, annotated further reading and websites.

Thought-provoking and accessible, this book presents a fresh view of the Global South that challenges students' preconceptions and promotes lively debate.
