NEW3RD EDITION

Urban Geography

A Global Perspective

Michael Pacione, University of Strathclyde, UK

Today, for the first time in the history of Humankind, urban dwellers outnumber rural residents. Urban places, towns and cities, are of fundamental importance – for the distribution of population within countries; in the organization of economic production, distribution and exchange; in the structuring of social reproduction and cultural life; and in the allocation and exercise of power. Furthermore, in the course of the present century the number of urban dwellers and level of global urbanization are destined to increase. Even those living beyond the administrative or functional boundaries of a town or city will have their lifestyle influenced to some degree by a nearby, or even distant, city.

The analysis of towns and cities is a central element of all social sciences including geography, which offers a particular perspective on and insight into the urban condition. The principal goal of this third edition of the book remains that of providing instructors and students of the contemporary city with a comprehensive introduction to the expanding field of urban studies. The structure of the first two editions is maintained, with minor amendments. Each of the thirty chapters has been revised to incorporate recent developments in the field. All of the popular study aids are retained, the glossary has been expanded, and chapter references and notes updated to reflect the latest research. This third edition also provides new and expanded discussion of key themes and debates including detailed consideration of metacities, boomburbs, public space, urban sprawl, balanced communities, urban economic restructuring, poverty and financial exclusion, the right to the city, urban policy, reverse migration, and traffic and transport problems.

New to this edition are: further readings based on the latest research; updated data and statistics; an expanded glossary; new key concepts; additional study questions; and a listing of useful websites.

The book provides a comprehensive interpretation of the urban geography of the contemporary world. Written in a clear and readable style, lavishly illustrated with more than 80 photographs, 180 figures, 100 tables and over 200 boxed studies and a plethora of study aids, Urban Geography: A Global Perspective represents the ultimate resource for students of urban geography.

3RD EDITION

Urban Geography

Tim Hall, University of Gloucestershire, UK

Series: Routledge Contemporary Human Geography

More than simply examining the new geographical patterns forming within cities, this third edition of Urban Geography also investigates the way geographers have sought to make sense of this urban transformation. Tim Hall critically synthesizes key literatures in the following areas:

- approaches to urban geography
- economic geography of the city
- urban policy
- new urban forms and landscapes
- impacts of urban change
- sustainability and the city.

Hall's revised third edition features enhanced pedagogy including boxed discussion points, end of chapter research questions, and an introductory chapter which outlines the importance of urban geography. Additionally a new concluding chapter encourages students to apply what they have read to their own experiences of cities and helps them to apply these ideas to a dissertation. An important volume, this revised edition is an essential read for students and scholars of urban geography.

Selected Contents: 1. Why Urban Geography? 2. New Cities, New Urban Geographies 3. Changing Approaches in Urban Geography 4. The Changing Economic Geography of the City 5. Urban Policy and Regeneration 6. Transforming the Image of the City 7. Recent Urban Change 8. Unequal Cities 9. Sustainability and the City 10. Your Urban Geographies

NEWEnvironment and the City

Peter Roberts, University of Leeds, UK,
Joe Ravetz and Clive George, both at University of Manchester, UK

Series: Routledge Introductions to Environment

Environment and the City is an introduction to the many layers of the 'human urban environment'. It examines the full range of issues and elements that make-up the urban environment, including the consumption of resources, population pressures, and the pattern of urban development. These different issues and elements are examined through adopting an inter-disciplinary perspective, drawing equally on geography, sociology, economics and political science, as well as the environmental and resource sciences. As a consequence, the book is able to focus on the key debates that are of critical importance for the cities of both the developed and less-developed nations. The result is not a simple, single solution, rather the book offers a set of directions and tools of enquiry that provide a realistic and practical approach to understanding and managing sustainable cities and regions.

This book is a concise and accessible guide for all students interested in the environmental issues emanating from our urban societies.

Selected Contents: Part 1: The Human Urban Environment 1. Introduction 2. The Human Urban Environment – Scope and Methods 3. Future Cities – Urban Environments in Transition 4. Urban Environments in a Global Context Part 2: From Causes To Effects 5. Towards the Eco-City – the Physical Urban Environment 6. City Form and Fabric – the Urban Built Environment 7. Cities in Global Markets – the Economic Urban Environment 8. Community and Lifestyle – the Social Urban Environment Part 3: From Problems To Solutions 9. Planning for Sustainability

Creating Livable, Equitable and Ecological Communities

Stephen M. Wheeler, University of New Mexico, USA

This book presents a straightforward, systematic analysis of how more sustainable cities and towns can be brought about, considering each scale of planning: international, national, regional, municipal, neighbourhood, site and building.

2004: 246x174: 288pp

NEWCities and Development

Jo Beall and Sean Fox, both at London School of Economics, UK

Series: Routledge Perspectives on Development

'Most books about developing cities tend to be written from the standpoint of either academic disciplinary theorizing or from practitioner concerns with a problem, such as urban upgrading. The strength of this book lies in its focus on the role of cities in development from a multidisciplinary perspective which will appeal to students.' – Stella Lowder, University of Glasgow, UK

Cities and Development provides a critical exploration of the dynamic relationship between urbanism and development. Highlighting both the challenges and opportunities associated with rapid urban change, the book surveys topics such as:

- the historical relationship between urbanization and development
- the role cities play in fostering economic growth in a globalizing world
- the unique characteristics of urban poverty and the poor record of interventions designed to tackle it
- the importance of urban planning, governance and politics in shaping city futures.

The book is intended for senior undergraduate and graduate students interested in urban, international and development studies, as well as policy makers and planners concerned with equitable and sustainable urban development.

Selected Contents: 1. Introduction: Development in the First Urban Century 2. Urbanisation and Development in Historical Perspective 3. Urbanism and Economic Development 4. Urban Poverty and Vulnerability 5. Managing the Urban Environment 6. Human Security in Cities: Crime, Violence, War and Terrorism 7. Shaping City Futures: Urban Planning, Governance and Politics

NEW*Urban Regeneration in the UK

Andrew Tallon, University of the West of England, Bristol, UK

'Urban Regeneration in the UK is an excellent addition to the available texts on urban regeneration. It is well written and easy to read which makes it appropriate for both students and practitioners alike. It provides a comprehensive introduction to urban regeneration policy and history and discusses a varied range of situations and case studies.' – Dr. Ruth Richards, London South Bank University, UK

Exploring the streets of England's major cities, one cannot help but notice the striking transformations taking place in the urban landscapes. This prominent regeneration of urban areas in the UK and around the world has become an increasingly important issue amongst governments and populations. The growing concern has been a result of the impacts of the decline of cities since the collapse of manufacturing industries and the heightening of global competition. A range of innovative approaches to tackle urban problems have been taken over many decades to attempt to regenerate the fortunes of towns and cities across the UK.

This text provides an accessible, yet critical, synthesis of urban regeneration in the UK incorporating key policies, approaches, issues and debates. The central objective of the book is to place the historical and contemporary regeneration agenda into context.

Selected Contents: Section 1: The Context for Urban Regeneration 1. Introduction: The Decline and Rise of UK Cities Section 2: Central Government Urban Regeneration Policy 2. The Early Years: Town and Country Planning and Area-Based Policies 3. Entrepreneurial Regeneration in the 1980s 4. Competition and Community in Urban Policy in the 1990s 5. New Labour, New Urban Policy? Regeneration Since the Late 1990s Section 3: Cities in Transition: Themes and Approaches 6. Urban Competitiveness 7. New Forms of Urban Governance 8. Community and Regeneration 9. Urban Regeneration and Sustainability 10. City Centre Retail-Led Regeneration 11. Housing-Led Regeneration and Gentrification 12. Leisure and Cultural Regeneration 13. Regenerating Suburban and Exurban Areas of Cities Section 4: Conclusion 14. Urban Regeneration into the Future

NEW

Cities and Suburbs

New Metropolitan Realities in the US

Bernadette F. Hanlon, John Rennie Short, both at University of Maryland Baltimore County, USA and Thomas J. Vicino, Wheaton College, USA

This book is a systematic examination of the historical and current roles that cities and suburbs play in US metropolitan areas. It explores the history of cities and suburbs, their changing dynamics with each other, their growing diversity, the environmental consequences of their development and finally the extent and nature of their decline and renewal.

Topics of discussion include:

- key ideas and concepts on the demographic and sociospatial aspects of metropolitan change
- the changing nature of city and suburban population migration and their relationships with changes at the local, metropolitan, national, and global levels
- current metropolitan public policy issues of large cities and suburbs
- links of suburbanization to metropolitan transformation and the growing dichotomy between suburban decline and suburban sprawl in metropolitan areas.

Cities and Suburbs relies on theorized case studies, demographic analysis, maps, and photos from North America. Written in a clear and accessible style, the book addresses various fundamental questions about the socioeconomic role that suburbs and cities play in shaping metropolitan areas, their environmental impact, the political consequences, and the resulting policy debates.

Selected Contents: Introduction 1. The New Metropolitan Landscape Part 1: The Rise of Metropolitan 2. The Rise of the City 3. The Rise of the Suburban Metropolis 4. The New Metropolis Part 2: Metropolitan Complexity 5. The New Metropolitan Model 6. Portraits of Metropolitan Diversity 7. The Rise of Immigrant Suburbs Part 3: Suburban Gothic 8. The Gentrification Reader

Edited by Loretta Lees, King's College London, UK, Tom Slater and Elvin Wyly, University of British Columbia, Canada

Gentrification is a durable element of urban structure and remains a key site of theoretical debate amongst scholars. More recently it is also a flashpoint for public discussion of major policy issues now that state-led gentrification is a central policy in many nations and cities around the world.

This Reader brings together in one volume both classic writings – often particularly hard to find – and contemporary literature which is spread over a wide variety of books and journals across many disciplines. The editors have selected the most influential readings, covering everything from the theories of gentrification through to analysis of state-led gentrification policies and community resistance to those policies. This is an unparalleled collection of writings on this most contentious of contemporary issues.

Cities and Gender

Helen Jarvis, University of Newcastle-Upon-Tyne, UK, Jonathan Cloke, Loughborough University, UK and Paula Kantor, Director of the Afghanistan Research and Evaluation Unit, Kabul, Afghanistan

'Cities and Gender provides a detailed ethnographic analysis demonstrating how gendered power relations are manifest in the structure of cities and everyday life within. At last, an accessible and incisive text that succeeds in intertwining urban and gender analysis.' – Diane Perrons, London School of Economics, UK

Men and women experience the city differently: in relation to housing assets, use of transport, relative mobility, spheres of employment and a host of domestic and caring responsibilities.

Cities and Gender is a systematic treatment of urban and gender studies combined. It presents both a feminist critique of mainstream urban policy and planning and a gendered reorientation of key urban social, environmental and city-regional debates.

It looks behind the 'headlines' on issues of transport, housing, uneven development, regeneration and social exclusion, for instance, to account for the 'hidden' infrastructure of everyday life. This is both a timely and trenchant discussion that has pertinence for students, scholars and researchers.

Selected Contents: Introduction Part 1: Approaching the City 1. From Binaries to Intersections 2. Historical Trends in Cities and Urban Studies 3. Trends in Urban Restructuring, Gender and Feminist Theory 4. Scale, Power and Interdependence Part 2: Gender and the Built Environment 5. Infrastructures of Daily Life 6. Migration, Movement and Mobility 7. Homes, Jobs, Communities and Networks Part 3: Representation and Regulation 8. Planning and Social Welfare 9. Urban Poverty, Livelihood and Vulnerability 10. Cities and Design

Paul L. Knox, Virginia Tech, USA

Cities and Design explores the complex relationships between design and urban environments. It traces the intellectual roots of urban design, presents a critical appraisal of the imprint and effectiveness of the design professions in shaping urban environments, examines the role of design in the material culture of contemporary cities, and explores the complex linkages among designers, producers, and distributors in contemporary cities. The book is distinctive in focusing on the economic and cultural context of design in contemporary cities, presenting cities themselves as settings for design and design services and emphasizing the 'affect' associated with design.

Questioning Cities

Edited by Gary Bridge, University of Bristol, UK

The Questioning Cities series brings together an unusual mix of urban scholars under the title. Rather than taking a broadly economic approach, planning approach or more socio-cultural approach, it aims to include titles from a multi-disciplinary field of those interested in critical urban analysis. The series thus includes authors who draw on contemporary social, urban and critical theory to explore different aspects of the city.

Globalization, Violence and the Visual Culture of Cities

Edited by Christoph Lindner, University of Amsterdam, Holland

What connects garbage dumps in New York, bomb sites in Baghdad, and skyscrapers in São Paulo? How is contemporary visual culture – extending from art and architecture to film and digital media – responding to new forms of violence associated with global and globalizing cities? Addressing such questions, this book is the first interdisciplinary volume to examine the complex relationship between globalization, violence, and the visual culture of cities.

Searching for the Just City

Debates in Urban Theory and Practice

Edited by Peter Marcuse, James Connolly, Johannes Novy, Ingrid Olivo, Cuz Potter and Justin Steil, all at Columbia University, USA

'Reading The Just City, one becomes aware that urban scholarship has been inexorably leading towards a book exactly like this one for a long time. These essays synthesize the debates that engaged us in our studies of the 20th-century city, and chart out the intellectual path we will be taking in the 21st.' – Dennis R. Judd, University of Illinois at Chicago

If today's cities are full of injustices, what would a 'Just City' look like? Contributors to this volume including David Harvey, Peter Marcuse and Susan Fainstein define the concept, examining it from multiple angles in addition to questioning it and suggesting alternatives.

Urban Assemblages

How Actor-Network Theory Changes Urban Studies

Edited by Ignacio Fariás, Social Science Research Centre, Germany and Thomas Bender, New York University, USA

This book proposes – and its various chapters offer demonstrations – importing into urban studies a body of theories, concepts, and perspectives developed in the field of science and technology studies (STS) and, more specifically, Actor-Network Theory (ANT). The essays examine artifacts, technical systems, architectures, place and eventful spaces, the persistence of history, imaginary and virtual elements of city life, and the politics and ethical challenges of a mode of analysis that incorporates multiple actors as hybrid chains of causation.

City Publics

The (Dis)enchantments of Urban Encounters

Edited by Sophie Watson, The Open University, UK

Through her investigation of the more ordinary and less dramatic forms of encounter and contestation in the city, Watson is able to conceive an urban public realm and urban public space that is heterogeneous and potentially progressive. With numerous photographs and drawings City Publics not only throws new light on encounters with others in public space, but also destabilizes dominant, sometimes simplistic, universalized accounts and helps us re-imagine urban public space as a site of potentiality, difference, and enchanted encounters.

NEWClub Cultures

Boundaries, Identities and Otherness

Silvia Rief, University of Innsbruck, Austria*Series: Routledge Advances in Sociology*

This book explores contemporary club and dance cultures as a manifestation of aesthetic and prosthetic forms of life. Rief addresses the questions of how practices of clubbing help cultivate particular forms of reflexivity and modes of experience, and how these shape new devices for reconfiguring the boundaries around youth cultural and other social identities. She contributes empirical analyses of how such forms of experience are mediated by the particular structures of night-clubbing economies, the organizational regulation and the local organization of experience in club spaces, the media discourses and imageries, the technologies intervening into the sense system of the body (e.g. music, visuals, drugs) and the academic discourses on dance culture. Although the book draws from local club scenes in London and elsewhere in the UK, it also reflects on similarities and differences between nightclubbing cultures across geographical contexts.

Branding New York

How a City in Crisis was Sold to the World

Miriam Greenberg, University of California, Santa Cruz, USA*Series: Cultural Spaces*

'This concise work explores the efforts of New York elites to brand their city in order to deal with repeated crises confronting the city in the last third of the 20th century ... A well-written and thoroughly researched urban history that makes a valuable contribution to the field. Highly recommended.'

– T.A. Aiello, CHOICE, February 2009

Branding New York traces the rise of New York City as a brand and the resultant transformation of urban politics and public life. Greenberg addresses the role of 'image' in urban history, showing who produces brands and how, and demonstrates the enormous consequences of branding. She shows that the branding of New York was not simply a marketing tool; rather it was a political strategy meant to legitimize market-based solutions over social objectives.

Dubai: Behind an Urban Spectacle

Yasser Elsheshtawy, UAE University, United Arab Emirates

Series: Planning, History and Environment

Yasser Elsheshtawy explores Dubai's history from its beginnings as a small fishing village to its place on the world stage today, using historical narratives, travel descriptions, novels and fictional accounts by local writers to bring colour to his history of the city's urban development.

With the help of case studies and surveys this book explores the economic and political forces driving Dubai's urban growth, its changing urbanity and its place within the global city network. Uniquely, it looks beyond the glamour of Dubai's mega-projects, and provides an in-depth exploration of a select set of spaces which reveal the city's 'inner life'.

Theorists of the City

Walter Benjamin, Henri Lefebvre and Michel de Certeau

Jenny Bavidge, University of Greenwich, UK

Series: Routledge Critical Thinkers

Theories of the city have been fundamental to the development of modernism and postmodernism, and are increasingly important in the fields of cultural studies and visual culture.

Jenny Bavidge focuses on the work of three leading city theorists – Benjamin, Lefebvre and de Certeau – whose work represents key schools of thought or emphases within the areas of cultural geography, urban studies and spatial theory.

Theorists of the City is essential reading to further explore issues of locality, social space, architecture and urban aesthetics; key ideas discussed through the work of these three thinkers include:

- flaneurie
- situationism
- psychogeography
- heterotopia.

NEWThe Integration Debate

Competing Futures for American Cities

Edited by Chester Hartman, Poverty and Race Research Action Council, USA and Gregory D. Squires, George Washington University, USA

Racial integration, and policies intended to achieve greater integration, continue to generate controversy in the United States, with some of the most heated debates taking place among long-standing advocates of racial equality. Today, many nonwhites express what has been referred to as 'integration exhaustion' as they question the value of integration in today's world. And many whites exhibit what has been labeled 'race fatigue', arguing that we have done enough to reconcile the races. Many policies have been implemented in efforts to open up traditionally restricted neighborhoods, while others have been designed to diversify traditionally poor, often nonwhite, neighborhoods. Still, racial segregation persists, along with the many social costs of such patterns of uneven development. This book explores both long-standing and emerging controversies over the nation's ongoing struggles with discrimination and segregation. More urgently, it offers guidance on how these barriers can be overcome to achieve truly balanced and integrated living patterns.

Selected Contents: 1. 'Integration Exhaustion, Race Fatigue, and the American Dream' – Chester Hartman, Poverty and Race Research Action Council and Gregory D. Squires, George Washington University 2. 'Welcome to the Neighborhood? The Persistence of Discrimination and Segregation' – Shanna Smith and Cathy Cloud, National Fair Housing Alliance 3. 'From Segregation to Integration: How Do We Get There?' – Nancy A. Denton, University at Albany, SUNY 4. Henri Lefebvre

A Critical Introduction

Andrew Merrifield

'A lively introduction to the work of the twentieth century's last great undiscovered philosopher. Henri Lefebvre pioneered the theorization of everyday life and space, of the city and the festival, in innovative ways that are still unexplored and that might productively stimulate the multiple searches for a new politics under globalization which are in course everywhere today.' – Fredric Jameson, Author of Postmodernism, or the Cultural Logic of Late Capitalism

The American Suburb

The Basics

Jon C. Teaford, Purdue University, Indiana, USA

The American Suburb: The Basics is a compact, readable introduction to the origins and contemporary realities of the American suburb. Jon C. Teaford provides an account of contemporary American suburbia, examining its rise, its diversity, its commercial life, its government, and its housing issues. While offering a wide-ranging yet detailed account of the dominant way of life in America today, Teaford also explores current debates regarding suburbia's future. Americans live in suburbia, and this essential survey explains the all-important world in which they live, shop, play, and work.

Cohesion and Community in Contemporary Hong Kong

Ray Forrest, University of Bristol, UK, Adrienne La Grange and Ngai Ming Yip, both at City University of Hong Kong

Series: Routledge Contemporary Southeast Asia

This is an impressive account of Hong Kong's contemporary social and spatial structure, exploring issues of community, neighbourhood and social division.

Hong Kong's policy and political history, its essentially mono-cultural environment and its unique topography and built form have produced a rather different social milieu to make Hong Kong quite distinct from other major cities. In exploring these issues the book will also engage with a number of other topical debates in urban policy, social policy and sociology such as:

- what does community mean these days?
- do people think of themselves as neighbourly and have a sense of local belonging in the midst of this dominant discourse of globalization and more diffuse social networks?
- what can we learn from Hong Kong as regards social and environmental sustainability?

The authors of this fascinating text fuse locally based research on Hong Kong neighbourhoods with more macro level urban political economy to produce a comprehensive and up-to-date account of social and behavioral change in what is one of the most widely recognized urban landscapes in the world.

Selected Contents: 1. Introduction: High Rise City 2. Understanding Hong Kong's Development – A Brief Political Economy 3. City of Life 4. Reach for the Sky ... The Classless City of Opportunity 5. Asia's World City 6. A Machine for Living 7. Accommodating Social and Economic Change 8. The Local in the Global 9. Conclusion: Into the Future

Disrupted Cities

When Infrastructure Fails

Edited by Stephen Graham, Durham University, UK

Bringing together leading researchers from geography, political science, sociology, public policy and technology studies, Disrupted Cities exposes the politics of well-known disruptions such as devastation of New Orleans in 2005, the global SARS outbreak in 2002-3, and the great power collapse in the North Eastern US in 2003. But the book also excavates the politics of more hidden disruptions: the clogging of city sewers with fat; the day-to-day infrastructural collapses which dominate urban life in much of the global south; the deliberate devastation of urban infrastructure by state militaries; and the ways in which alleged threats of infrastructural disruption have been used to radically reorganize cities as part of the 'War on Terror'.

Accessible, topical and state-of-the art, Disrupted Cities will be required reading for anyone interested in the intersections of technology, security and urban life as we plunge headlong into this quintessentially urban century. The book's blend of cutting-edge theory with visceral events means that it will be particularly useful for illuminating urban courses within geography, sociology, planning, anthropology, political science, public policy, architecture and technology studies.

Selected Contents: 1. Disrupted Cities: When Infrastructure Fails – Stephen Graham and Simon Marvin 2. Cascading Failure: The Urban Effects of Infrastructure Disruptions – Richard G. Little 3. Disoriented City: Infrastructure, Order and Hurricane Katrina – Benjamin Sims 4. Power Loss: Electricity Failures in North America – Timothy W. Luke 5. Eco-Urbanity

Towards Well-Mannered Built Environments

Edited by Darko Radovic, University of Melbourne, Australia

There is need for change in our currently unsustainable cities. Carefully outlining paths towards better, sustainable ways of urban living, this book proposes a radical change in the ways we conceive and live our urban environments.

Bringing together diverse cultural and disciplinary views on urban sustainability, 18 leading academics and practitioners in sustainable architecture and urbanism explore global concerns of sustainability and urbanity.

These broad range of issues are clearly articulated and linked to concrete places and projects, merging research and cutting-edge design investigations to promote environmentally and culturally sensitive urban futures.

Strategic Planning for Regional Development in the UK

Edited by Harry T. Dimitriou, The Bartlett School of Planning, University College London, UK and Robin Thompson, Robin Thompson Associates and University College London, UK

Series: Natural and Built Environment

With contributions from leading academics and practitioners, Strategic Planning for Regional Development in the UK is the most up-to-date treatment of a fast-changing subject.

The book discusses:

- the evolution of regional planning in the UK and the strategic thinking involved
- the spatial implications of regional economic development policies
- the methods and techniques needed for the implementation of strategic planning for regional development
- how strategic planning for regional development is currently put into practice in three UK regions with different priorities.

Strategic Planning for Regional Development in the UK is essential reading for students and academics working within strategic and regional planning and provides policy makers and practitioners with a comprehensive and thought provoking introduction to this critically important emerging field.

NEWUrban Design and the British Urban Renaissance

Edited by John Punter, University of Cardiff, UK

This critical review of how the urban design dimension of the urban renaissance was developed and applied is based on expert academic assessments of progress in the 13 largest British cities. This includes four distinct areas of London, the eight 'core' English cities, and the four 'Celtic capitals' where local variants of the urban renaissance were developed. The case studies are preceded by a dissection of New Labour's renaissance agenda, and concluded by a synthesis of city achievements and failings, and their wider implications for the future of planning and design.

The different responses of each city, their varied physical, economic and social character and styles of governance and planning, and their contrasting design achievements and shortcomings provide a fascinating insight into how urban design is progressing in Britain. Their combined experiences highlight what needs to happen to consolidate the progress of the urban renaissance, and ensure its inclusiveness and sustainability. This book is essential reading for students and professionals of urban design and urban planning, and for all those who wish to improve the quality of the British urban environment.

NEWRe-Shaping Cities

How Global Mobility Transforms Architecture and Urban Form

Edited by Michael Guggenheim and Ola Söderström, University of Neuchâtel, Switzerland

Series: Architext

This original collection examines how architectural ideas, social models and building forms circulate round the world and become mediated and adapted to local conditions. The book shows how types such as skyscrapers, mosques or living history museums are imported, adapted and contested in different societies and how urban landscapes are reshaped by the global circulation of models drawn from elsewhere.

Written by scholars from different disciplinary backgrounds – architecture, anthropology, geography, literature, science studies and sociology – the book draws its inspiration from a series of different approaches and offers both original theoretical reflection and carefully crafted case-studies.

Sustainable Urban Development Volume 4

Changing Professional Practice

Edited by Ian Cooper, Eclipse Research Consultants, Cambridge, UK and Martin Symes, University of the West of England, UK

Series: Sustainable Urban Development

This fourth volume explores how the professions responsible for enhancing the built environment's sustainability seek to deliver this new agenda, offering multi-perspective case studies and discussion to argue for a rethinking of the role of urban development professional.

Showing how sustainability is rapidly becoming the norm for practitioners, the authors consider new types of professional knowledge, relationships between planning systems and property development, links between public and private sector organizations, ideas about long term responsibilities and new working practices for engaging with the public.

NEW

Britain's New Towns

Garden Cities to Sustainable Communities

Edited by Anthony Alexander, Alan Baxter and Associates, London, UK

The New Towns Programme of 1946 to 1970 was one of the most substantial periods of urban development in Britain. The New Towns have often been described as a social experiment; so what has this experiment proved?

This book covers the story of how these towns came to be built, how they aged, and the challenges and opportunities they now face as they begin phases of renewal. The new approaches in design throughout their past development reflect changes in society throughout the latter half of the twentieth century. These changes are now at the heart of the challenge of sustainable development.

The New Towns provide lessons for social, economic and environmental sustainability. These lessons are of great relevance for the regeneration of twentieth century urbanism and the creation of new urban developments today.

Selected Contents: Introduction 1. The New Towns in a New Light Part 1: Planning the New Towns 2. A Bit of a Bombshell 3. The Early New Towns 4. The Later New Towns 5. The Origin of the New Towns Concept Part 2: Building the New Towns 6. The Formulation of the New Towns Programme 7. Principles of New Town Design 8. A Leap into the Unknown Part 3: Living in the New Towns 9. Criticisms of the New Towns 10. How the New Towns Grew Old 11. New Towns in the Age of Sustainable Communities

NEWUrban Regeneration Management

International Perspectives

Edited by John Diamond, Edge Hill University, UK, Joyce Liddle, Nottingham Trent University, UK, Alan Southern, University of Liverpool, UK and Philip Osei, University of West Indies, Jamaica

Series: Routledge Advances in Management and Business Studies

This book was born out of the need to 'capture' the experience and understanding of the regeneration management process that is neither UK centric nor centered exclusively on urban areas. Written by experts working in the USA, Holland, Greece, Jamaica, Turkey, Spain, Trinidad and the Czech Republic, this book seeks to locate the issue of regeneration in a context which will enable the reader to reflect upon practices which are 'local' but are shaped by international processes.

As well as providing an accessible review of the theoretical literature on globalization and its impact upon managing regeneration initiatives, this book also illustrates these theoretical debates with specific examples which provide insight to both urban and rural developments. This book will be of great interest to students, researchers and practitioners engaged in regeneration management, providing a thematic exploration and examination of the 'global' regeneration experience.

NEWRegional Planning for Open Space

Edited by Arnold van der Valk, Wageningen University, the Netherlands and Terry van Dijk, University of Groningen, the Netherlands

Series: RTPI Library Series

Reviewing the limitations of various planning options, this book addresses the debate on how to preserve open space in the context of a growing metropolis.

The importance of open spaces for well-being in urban life is well-established. With case studies on internalization and valuation methods, this book critically examines the liberal discourse that urges the transfer of responsibility for open space from government to the market.

European and American expert authors confront political rhetoric with grounded analysis and conclude that the market needs to be combined with governmental efforts. They scrutinize the connection between open space and the planning institutions designed to implement its policy. The book provides practical pieces of insight in how to structure an open space problem, information on what to expect from instruments, and new ideas on alternative approaches.

NEW4 VOLUME SET*Urban Regeneration and Renewal

Edited by Andrew Tallon, University of the West of England, Bristol, UK

Series: Critical Concepts in Urban Studies

The pursuit of regeneration and renewal has played an important role in the history and development of the world's cities, and the theoretical and applied issues around these critical concepts are of increasing importance to governments and local populations, as well as to urban professionals and scholars. Particularly in postwar North America and Western Europe, this growing concern has often resulted from the decay and deterioration of cities associated with the decline in traditional industries and the associated loss of employment, and populations, to the suburbs and beyond.

The collection is divided into three principal sections. Section 1 ('Cities in Transition') covers the wider social, economic, political, and urban geographical context for urban regeneration and renewal, and documents the nature of changing cities. These processes and changes are inextricably linked with urban regeneration and renewal initiatives, and an understanding of these transitions is essential to place Sections 2 and 3 in perspective.

Section 2 ('Responses to Urban Change from National Governments') brings together the best overviews and critiques of urban policy initiatives implemented by central governments in developed countries during the postwar period. The materials gathered here span experiences and city examples from advanced economies across the world.

The final section ('City Responses to Urban Change') draws on the approaches taken by cities themselves in response to urban problems, particularly those designed to improve economic competitiveness and to combat social exclusion. Key research on the wide array of thematic approaches that have been followed is assembled in this section. Within the wider urban processes explored in Section 1, this section examines particular policy responses that have arisen in many cities, and considers a number of case-study cities from the UK, North America, continental Europe, the Far East, and Australasia.

NEWHandbook of Urban Ecology

Edited by Ian Douglas, University of Manchester, UK, David Goode, University College London, UK, Mike Houck, Portland State University, USA and Rusong Wang, Chinese Academy of Sciences, China

The birds, animals, insects, trees and plants encountered by the majority of the world's people are those that survive in, adapt to, or are introduced to, urban areas. Some of these organisms give great pleasure; others invade, colonize and occupy neglected and hidden areas such as derelict land and sewers. Urban ecology analyzes this biodiversity and complexity and provides the science to guide policy and management to make cities more attractive, more enjoyable, and better for our own health and that of the planet. This book provides a state-of-the-art guide to the science, practice and value of urban ecology to help everyone understand and enjoy their urban habitat.

Recapturing Democracy

Neoliberalization and the Struggle for Alternative Urban Futures

Mark Purcell, University of Washington, USA

Recapturing Democracy is a short yet synoptic introduction to urban democracy in our era of political neoliberalism and economic globalization. Combining an original argument with a number of case studies, Mark Purcell explores the condition of democracy in contemporary Western cities. Whereas many scholars focus on what Purcell calls 'procedural democracy' – i.e., electoral politics and access to it – he instead assesses 'substantive democracy.' By this he means the people's ability to have some say over issues of social justice, material well being, and economic equality. Neoliberalism, which advocates a diminished role for the state and increasing power for mobile capital, has diminished substantive democracy in recent times, he argues. He looks at case studies where this has occurred and at others that show how neoliberalism can be resisted in the name of substantive democracy. Ultimately, he utilizes Henri Lefebvre's notion of 'the right to the city,' which encompasses substantive as well as procedural democracy for ordinary urban citizens.

NEWThe City in American Political Development

Edited by Richardson Dilworth, Drexel University, USA

'This is a uniquely strong edited volume. Dilworth has assembled an impressive and remarkable range of the very smartest scholars working on the topic today. There is no book or article currently available that does what this book does, and the intellectual impact of this volume will be quite profound. This book has the potential to challenge and transform both APD and urban studies.' – Dorian T. Warren, Columbia University, USA

There are nearly 20,000 general-purpose municipal governments – cities – in the United States, employing more people than the federal government. About 20 of those cities received charters of incorporation well before ratification of the U.S. Constitution, and several others were established urban centers more than a century before the American Revolution. Yet despite their estimable size and prevalence in the United States, city government and politics has been a woefully neglected topic within the recent study of American political development.

The volume brings together some of the best of both the most established and the newest urban scholars in political science, sociology, and history, each of whom makes a new argument for rethinking the relationship between cities and the larger project of state-building. Each chapter shows explicitly how the American city demonstrates durable shifts in governing authority throughout the nation's history. By filling an important gap in scholarship the book will thus become an indispensable part of the American political development canon, a crucial component of graduate and undergraduate courses in APD, urban politics, urban sociology, and urban history, and a key guide for future scholarship.

NEWThe New Political Economy of Urban Education

Neoliberal Urbanism, Race, and the Right to the City

Pauline Lipman, University of Illinois-Chicago, USA
Series: Critical Social Thought

In The New Political Economy of Urban Education, Lipman analyzes the relationship of education policy and neoliberal urbanism drawing, on scholarship in critical geography, urban sociology and anthropology, education policy, and critical analyses of race. Lipman uses Chicago as a case study of how recent educational policies and practices are intertwined in political-economic processes and the implications for equity, justice and the restructuring of the city.

NEWWhose Public Space?

International Case Studies in Urban Design and Development

Edited by Ali Madanipour, University of Newcastle, UK

Public spaces mirror the complexities of urban societies: as historic social bonds have weakened and cities have become collections of individuals public open spaces have also changed from being embedded in the social fabric of the city to being a part of more impersonal and fragmented urban environments. Can making public spaces help overcome this fragmentation, where accessible spaces are created through inclusive processes? This book offers some answers to this question through analyzing the process of urban design and development in international case studies, in which the changing character, level of accessibility, and the tensions of making public spaces are explored.

The book uses a coherent theoretical outlook to investigate a series of case studies, crossing the cultural divides to examine the similarities and differences of public space in different urban contexts, and its critical analysis of the process of development, management and use of public space, with all its tensions and conflicts. While each case study investigates the specificities of a particular city, the book outlines some general themes in global urban processes. It shows how public spaces are a key theme in urban design and development everywhere, how they are appreciated and used by the people of these cities, but also being contested by and under pressure from different stakeholders.

NEWCommon Ground?

Readings and Reflections on Public Space

Anthony M. Orum and Zachary P. Neal, both at University of Illinois, Chicago, USA

Series: The Metropolis and Modern Life

Public spaces have long been the focus of urban social activity, but investigations of how public space works often adopt only one of several possible perspectives, which restricts the questions that can be asked and the answers that can be considered. In this volume, Anthony Orum and Zachary Neal explore how public space can be a facilitator of civil order, a site for power and resistance, and a stage for art, theatre, and performance. They bring together these frequently unconnected models for understanding public space, collecting classic and contemporary readings that illustrate each, and synthesizing them in a series of original essays. Throughout, they offer questions to provoke discussion, and conclude with thoughts on how these models can be combined by future scholars of public space to yield more comprehensive understanding of how public space works.

Whose Urban Renaissance?

An International Comparison of Urban Regeneration Strategies

Edited by Libby Porter and Kate Shaw, University of Melbourne, Australia

Series: Routledge Studies in Human Geography

The desire of city governments for a 'renaissance' of their inner-cities has become a defining feature of contemporary urban policy. From Berlin and Toronto to Johannesburg and Beijing, government policies are succeeding in attracting investment and middle-class populations (back) to their inner areas. Cities undergoing regeneration – or gentrification as this process can often become – produce winners and losers. There is now a substantial literature on the inequitable effects of rent increases and displacement, for example, and even more on the global and local contexts for urban regeneration and the reasons governments encourage it. But there is very little exploration of the policies used to drive regeneration.

Shrinking Cities

International Perspectives and Policy Implications

Edited by Karina M. Pallagst, University of California at Berkeley, USA, Thorsten Wiechmann, Institute of Ecological and Regional Development, Germany and Cristina Martinez-Fernandez, University Western Sydney, Australia

Series: Routledge Advances in Geography

The shrinking city phenomenon is a multidimensional process that affects cities, parts of cities or metropolitan areas around the world that have experienced dramatic decline in their economic and social bases. Shrinkage is not a new phenomenon in the study of cities. However, shrinking cities lack the precision of systemic analysis where other factors now at work are analyzed: the new economy, globalization, aging population (a new population transition) and other factors related to the search for quality of life or a safer environment. This volume places shrinking cities in a global perspective, setting the context for in-depth case studies of cities within Mexico, Brazil, Indonesia, Germany, France, Great Britain, South Korea, Australia, and the USA, which consider specific economic, social, environmental, cultural and land-use issues.

Cities, Citizens, and Technologies

Urban Life and Postmodernity

Paula Geyh, Yeshiva University, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Cultural and Media Studies

This book is an investigation of how contemporary – postmodern – cities and their inhabitants have been transformed by the forces of globalization and new information technologies. Drawing upon a wide range of discourses, from architectural theory and urban studies to psychoanalysis and Marxism, it explores this transformation through readings of contemporary literature, film, art, and real-world urban and cyber spaces.

Urbicide

The Politics of Urban Destruction

Martin Coward, University of Sussex, UK

Series: Routledge Advances in International Relations and Global Politics

Developing the concept of urbicide – the deliberate destruction of cities – Martin Coward outlines a theoretical understanding of the urban condition at stake in such violence. The first comprehensive analysis, Coward argues that it is necessary to address the widespread and deliberate destruction of buildings as a distinct form of political violence.

Education Policy, Space and the City

Kalervo N. Gulson, Charles Sturt University, Australia

Series: Routledge Studies in Educational Policy and Politics

This book examines the relationships between educational policy, space and place. With urbanization as one of the central concerns for the future, relationships between the city, educational policy, and social and educational inequality deserve sustained examination. Gulson's book is a rich and needed contribution to these areas of study.

The Economics of Urban Property Markets

An Institutional Economics Analysis

Paschalis Arvanitidis, University of Thessaly, Greece

Series: Routledge Studies in the European Economy

Mainstream urban and real estate economics tend to ignore the supply side of the economy and to undervalue the significant role that the property market plays in the economic development of cities.

The Economics of Urban Property Markets is a cohesive analysis and synthesis of a wide range of factors that determine the regional development of cities. The book draws on institutional economics to explore the mechanisms, processes and dynamics through which the built environment is provided, and considers how these affect urban economic potential. The author advances the argument that the property market as an institution is a mediator through which economic potential can be realized and served.

Business Networks in Clusters and Industrial Districts

The Governance of the Global Value Chain

Edited by Fiorenza Belussi, University of Padova, Italy and Alessia Sammarra, University of L'Aquila, Italy

Series: Regions and Cities

How do we define and identify districts and clusters? How do they evolve? How do clusters and districts relate to the global economy? What policy options are available to promote them in east and west economies?

This collection of papers from international experts includes theoretical and empirical contributions examining these questions and offering deep insights into the internal-external mechanism of knowledge circulation and learning.

Architecture, Power and National Identity

Lawrence Vale, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, USA

The first edition of Architecture, Power, and National Identity, published in 1992, has become a classic, winning the prestigious Spiro Kostof award for the best book in architecture and urbanism. Lawrence Vale fully has fully updated the book, which focuses on the relationship between the design of national capitals across the world and the formation of national identity in modernity. Tied to this, it explains the role that architecture and planning play in the forceful assertion of state power. The book is truly international in scope, looking at capital cities in the United States, India, Brazil, Sri Lanka, Kuwait, Bangladesh, and Papua New Guinea.

Selected Contents: Part 1: The Locus of Political Power

1. Capital and Capitol: An Introduction 2. National Identity and the Capitol Complex 3. Early Designed Capitals: For Union, for Imperialism, for Independence 4. Designed Capitals after World War Two: Chandigarh and Brasília 5. Designed Capitals Since 1960 Part 2: Four Postcolonial Capitol Complexes in Search of National Identity 6. Papua New Guinea's Concrete Haus Tambaran 7. Sri Lanka's Island Parliament 8. Precast Arabism for Kuwait 9. The Acropolis of Bangladesh 10. Designing Power and Identity
