Islam in Southeast Asia

CRITICAL CONCEPTS IN ISLAMIC STUDIES

Edited and with a new introduction by Joseph Liow, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore and Nadirsyah Hosen, University of Wollongong, Australia

The Islamic community in Southeast Asia is widely regarded as one of the most moderate and tolerant in the Muslim world. While most of the region's Muslims are Sunni and fairly orthodox, the Islamic faith as practiced in the region has historically been a syncretic blend of Islam, Hinduism, Buddhism, and folk religions. The syncretic roots of Southeast Asian Islam also underscore the pluralistic nature of Islam in the region today, where Muslims have generally lived peacefully in religiously mixed communities, even in areas where they constituted a large majority. Alongside these pluralistic trends in Southeast Asian Islam are some alternative streams of social-political activism that threaten its traditionally inclusivist character.

Focusing on the historical, cultural, sociological, theological, and intellectual aspects of Islam in Southeast Asia, this new Major Work from Routledge assesses trends in Muslim politics in Southeast Asia, investigating the success and failure of political Islam in the Muslim-majority cases of Indonesia and Malaysia, as well as the Muslim-minority contexts of Thailand, Philippines, and Singapore.

Fully indexed and with an introduction newly written by the editors that comprehensively places the collected material in its historical and intellectual context, this new Routledge Major Work is destined to be an essential research and teaching resource.
